

AMERICAN JAZZ VOCALIST | VIOLINIST | SONGWRITER

EMMALINE

BIOGRAPHY

International artist profile

01 A MODERN VOICE WITH TIMELESS SOPHISTICATION

Emmaline is the stage name of Emma Campbell, a Nashville-based American vocalist, violinist, songwriter, arranger and independent recording artist. Her musical identity unites classic jazz elegance, the emotional warmth of soul, contemporary pop accessibility and the energy of funk. Her smoky voice and distinctive violin work create a refined sound that feels both nostalgic and current.

She began building her audience in 2018 through acoustic covers, jazz-inspired reinterpretations and original songs. Her releases have generated millions of streams and her international following has grown to nearly 500,000. On stage, she is equally at home in an intimate jazz room, an elegant theatre, a luxury hotel or a headline concert setting.

FROM SCREEN TO STAGE

A complete artistic identity with international appeal

03 SCREEN, SOUNDTRACK & ARTISTIC SIGNATURE

On April 14, 2023, Emmaline made her screen debut in the motion picture Sweetwater, released in more than 1,200 U.S. cinemas. She portrayed Jeanne Staples alongside Richard Dreyfuss, Cary Elwes and Jeremy Piven. Her voice appears throughout the soundtrack on classics including 'It Had to Be You,' 'The Man I Love' and 'Down Home Blues,' performed as a duet with Gary Clark Jr.

Her performances combine controlled, nuanced vocals with assured stage presence and instrumental flair. Violin solos, jazz-pop arrangements and a warm audience connection allow her to move naturally between elegant standards, soulful reinterpretations and original songs - sophisticated entertainment with strong visual identity.
